PIONEER MILLMAN DIES SUDDENLY AN HOME

Martin R. Zimmerman, pioneer carpenter of this city, passed away suddenly at his home at Arguello and Brewster streets Wednesday noon, apparently from a heart attark. He had not been complaining of feeling ill, and despite of his 79 years had always enjoyed good health.

The deceased was a native of Indiana, but had been a resident of this state for the past 54 years, many of which had been spent in Redwood City, where he came in 1906 from Placerville. Here he plied his trade of carpenter and cabinet maker, and for many years has maintained a shop on Arguello street.

He was the last of the charter members of Knights of Pythias lodge in Placerville.

The deceased was the husband of Mrs. Angeline Zimmerman, who assed away in 1922, and is survived by five sons and two daughters. The sons are Frank, Robert, Harry, Ben and Fred Zimmerman. The daughters are Mrs. Roy Leberschott of this city and Mrs. Edna Lievano of San Francisco. Another daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith passed away a few years ago.

Funeral services will be held for the aged man on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the chapel of Layng & Tinney. Rev. Thomas of St. Peter's church will officiate. Interment will follow in charge. Interment will follow in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

New Car Agency To Open Here

What is said to be one of the most completely equipped garage service departments on the peninsula will be opened here tomorrow in connection with the Hudson and Essex agency on the highway. The establishment is being made ready today by E. G. Hinds & Co., who has secured the agency in this territory for the two well known cars.

E. G. Hinds is a competent auto mechanic as well as a skilled salesman. He has had many years of experience in the automobile business, and was for 10 years with Weinstock Nichols of San Francisco and later for five years with the Ford agency of that city.

In the equipment of the service department no effort has been spared to make it complete in every respect. The equipment includes an Ampco test bench, for testing all kinds of electrical equipment, an 8 hour constant potential charging unit for batteries and the most modern equipment for laquering machines, as well as brake servicing equipment and the other machinery necessary to the modern plant.

In opening his establishment here Mr. Hinds expresses his desire to co-operate with the other auto dealers and offers an invitation to the public to call and inspect his new plant and be shown through the garage, which occupies a new building near Broadway on the highway. A special feature of the design is that a car may be taken into and out of the garage without the necessity of turning around, which is sometimes very inconvenient when a building is crowded.

EUROPE HEEDS CALL OF WEST

The number of foreign tourists visiting the Pacific Coast is greater this year than ever before and is mounting consistently from season to season, according to F. S. McGinnis, passenger traffic manager for Southern Pacific Company.

One reason advanced in explanation is that, beauty spot and natural wonder for natural wonder, the far west can match or surpass almost anything that Europe has to offer.

"Almost invariably visitors comment upon the endless variety of our scenic attractions," McGinnis said.

"In the north are fiords outrivaling those of Norway. We have Switzerland's mountains with additional glaciers thrown in for good measure. Neither Ireland, Scotland nor Italy can produce a lake more lovely than Tahoe.

"We lead in variety and quality of climate. Our scenery ranges from desert oasis and enternal snow peaks, to the rolling oak-shaded meadows of Engand, the bodly beautiful coast lines of the Mediterranean, the rivers of France, and the missions of Spain.

"Our streams and seas abound in sporting fish and game fills our forests. Added to these we have such natural wonders a petrified forests, Yosemite Valley and the largest and oldest of living things—the big trees. Last, but not least, we have the best transportation systems in the world with which to bring these wonders and out-door playgrounds within easy reach of visitors."

CROSSING TO BE IMPROVED BY REMOVING TREES

The crossing at Rogers street and the Southern Pacific tracks will be improved by the removal of trees along Roger street between the highway and the railroad track, according to action taken by the board of trustees Monday evening. The removal of the trees will make the crossing safer, it was thought, by making the wig-wag signal more visible from the street.

This action was taken following a letter from the Southern Pacific Company, in which the company refused to comply with a request made by the board of trustees that a crossing flagman be placed on this crossing. The request was made after two bad accidents had occured at this crossing, one of them fatal.

According to the Southern Pacific, this is one of the safest crossings on the peninsula and only by educating motorists in taking care at crossing can conditions be improved. The company suggested that arterial stop signs be erected at all railroad crossings and that regulations be enforced.

The broad did not think favorably of the stop signal suggestion and no action was taken other than ordering the trees removed.

PLAN REGULATIONS FOR NEW HIGHWAYS

A plan presented by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce by the president, D. R. Stafford, which would have all new highways built at least three hundred feet from railroad right-of-ways, was endorsed by the board of trustees Monday evening. The plan was evolved, Stafford stated, because of the fact that it is difficult to obtain spur track facilities across a public highway. And owing to the fact that many of the highways follow the railroad tracks very closely, much valuable industrial land is hampered in its development.

The plan as presented, Stafford explained, is sponsored by the California Development Association, and has been endorsed by many chambers of commerce and civic bodies throughout the state.

LEGION TO GET CALIF. BUILDING AFTER EXPOSITION AT RENO

W. A. Shepard, Commissioner for California to the Nevada Trans continental Highway Exposition, to be held in Reno from June 25th to August 1st, this year, announces that work started on May 2nd on the temporary portion of the California building. All will be in readiness by June 1st for tht installation of exhibits. California's permanent building was completed January 1st, and dedicated on March 12th. The temporary structure will dove-tail into the permanent building, and all in all will give an exhibit space of 150x150 feet. The inside decorations, which are Spanish in design, will be the most colorful ever seen in an exhibit building. Thus far, thirty-five California counties and one Oregon county will be represented in the display; others will follow. Splendid exhibits will also be made by the various California State Departments—State Highway, Motor Vehicle, Agriculture, Mining and Forestry. There will also be an educational exhibit. When the exposition is over, the temporary structure will be removed, while the permanent building will remain as California's gift to Darrel Dunkle Post, American Legion of Reno, in memory of all those who gave their lives to their country during the World War.

PAGE HERCULES

Hercules cleaned up the Augean stables; St. George cleaned up on the dragon; Midas cleaned up by the touch system; and T. R. cleaned up New York; but for cleaning up, the palm must now go to W. H. Murphy.

Here, gentle reader, you see Mr. Murphy, himself, sweeping off his sidewalk. No, clean-up Week has nothing to do with this gentleman's occupation, for ths a regular job with him every morning.

Murphy says that he really doesn't mind having the mess on his sidewalk—but being of a slight build and frail constitution, the effort of the daily sweep is proving too much for him.

The life-like representation of the gallant wielder of the broom was taken by his neighbor, Fred Musso, as he paused between strokes to mop his brow.

BIG SHIPMENT LEAVES LOCAL CANNING PLANT

The Redwood City branch of the Pratt Low cannery this week completed the shipment of 30,000 cases of canned fruit to England. This is one of the largest shipments made by the local plant this year.

This shipment contained about 1,500,000 small cans and the crates employed in the shipment required five car loads of lumber for their construction. The fruit was shipped out in thirty box cars and represents a value of approximately $150,000.

The English have become heavy consumers of California fruit and the English market for small sizes of canned fruit has proved a very good one to the local cannery. A large portion of each crop is packed for English trade at the Pratt Low plant here.

Decision is Rendered in Matter of Will

On Monday Judge John L. Hudner rendered a decision in th matter of the petition of R. H. Hellman, asking that Attorney Gerald C. Halsey, executor of the will of Addie P. Tripp, deceased, executed a deed to two and one-fifth acres of land, a part of a twenty-two and one-fifth acres tract at Woodside, owned by the estate. The court denied the prayer of the petition in the following opinion:

"Whilst the reasons urged against the sale here sought to be confirmed are potent, the court regards the uncertainty of the option itself as controlling against the confirmation. The uncertainty in that regards consists in the absence of definiteness of the vendor. Perhaps the owner of the land could not control its disposition after her death except by provision in her will and the will provides otherwise that is devises the land to others thereby in effect revoking the option.

"The prayer of the petition will be denied.

"Judge John L. Hudner"

The petition was filed under a contract and agreement to sell executed 13 years ago by the deceased. The price agreed upon was $500 an acre. Hellman alleged the contract was binding, while Halsey claims the contract was revoked by the death of Miss Tripp, and therefore failed to make the transfer. The Congregational church of Woodside filed an opposition to the Hellman petition alleging that the price was entirely too low that the land is now worth $2000 an acre. Under the terms of Miss Tripp's will the Congregational church of Woodside secures a one third interest in the tract of twenty-two and one-fifth acres, hence its interest in the estate. The executor was represented in the matter by F. T. Leo and John D. Gish and Hellman by Ross and Ross.

Miss Tripp was the only daughter of the late R. O. Tripp and his only heir. She left an estate appraised at $35,000, bequeathed to friends and relatives and the Congregational church of Woodside of which she was a member for a great many years.

R. O. Trip was one of the first residents of Woodside and the first postmaster on the peninsula. He established a merchandise store at Woodside in the early fifties on the tract of land now in dispute.

The exercises will be held in the County Courthouse which was built in 1852 and is one of Californias most noteable landmarks.

California is still having a harder job choosing a suitable figure to represent the State in Statuary Hall in Washington, D. C., than it usually has choosing a national committeeman. The two candidates for the Hall of Fame proposed by the Legislature are Fra Junipero Serra, representing the Spanish civilization of the State, and Thomas Starr King, representing the American era. No opposition has developed to the first named, but the selection of King is less fortunate. Former Senator Phelan is one of the leaders in the opposition to King.

Senora Precentacion Ballestero de Clark, said to be a great granddaughter of Jose Navarro, one of the founders of Los Angeles, who accompanied Fra Junipero Serra and Philipi de Nevo from Spain, died last week in Los Angeles, aged 71. Among the surviving relatives is a sister, Mrs. E. Naud of San Francisco.

The members of the Board of Town Trustees of St. Helena have unanimously gone on record as favoring a bond issue to be submitted to the voters of the town for the purpose of constructing a new Town Hall and fire house.

The official recapitulation of the legislative measures sent to Governor Young shows a total of 1085 propositions concurred in by both houses during the forty-seventh session. This compares with 1076 two years ago. The number of measures introduced was 2355, against 2233 in 1925. In the Senate there were 897 bills introduced, of which only 453 reached the Governor. The thirty-three constitutional amendments were reduced to six by the close of the session, while the twenty-nine concurrent and twelve joint resolutions were cut to twenty and nine, respectively, during the session. The Assemblymen introduced 1294 bills, but only 569 were given final passage. They also framed thirty-five constitutional amendments and of these all but two were defeated. Twenty of the thirty-seven concurrent resolutions and half the eighteen joint resolutions also were beaten either on the floor or by the committees of the two houses.

The job of painting the world's largest highway bridge is nearing completion. Carquinez bridge—mighty span of steel and concrete flung across the turbulent neck of San Francisco Bay at its northern extremity—is undergoing its bath of battle-gray paint. Perched on scaffolding and clinging to guide ropes, 350 feet above the water, the brush wielders are "doing their stuff." It will require 90 tons of paint to cover the entire structure. This is the largest bridge painting job in the history of the West and is the largest single painting job on record in California. Every inch of the giant structure is being covered with three coats of weather-proof, specially prepared paint. One gallon of paint covers four tons of steel and this means that 90 tons of paint are required for the entire job.

How he battled his way to within 501 feet of the ice-clad summit of Mount Whitney without spikes and on short provisions was related by Hank Weber, San Rafael musher, who now is recovering from physical hardships suffered in his dash up the peak. After five unsuccessful attempts to be the first man to climb the highest mountain in the United States, Weber was ready to depart from Lone Pine with his team of airdale dogs for return to his home in Marin county. Weber is said to have gained a greater altitude on the mountain in its winter garb than perhaps any other man.

Miss Alice M. Reading of Anderson, daughter of Major P. B. Reading, recently discovered among the papers left by her father the original treaty of peace made at Reading's ranch, or Fort Reading, on August 16, 1851, and entered into by the chiefs of all the tribes in this part of the state. This treaty assigned to the Indians all the land on the east side of the Sacramento River from the mouth of Ash Creek, at Balls Ferry, up that stream twenty-five miles and thence north to Pitt River.

The Federal Land Bank of Berkeley reports that during the month of April, 1927, it paid the total of $758,300 to farm loan applicants in the district covering California, Utah, Nevada, and Arizona. Two hundred and twenty-six applications for loans were received, covering the total of $1,513,900. The number of loans allowed were 149. This made the gross number of loans allowed since organization of the bank in 1917 total 16,386, representing in cash $61,634,900.

California, long known as the world's fruit and vegetable basket, apparently has fame as the home of another product—pedigreed pigeons. For the state department of agriculture has been appealed to by a large Japanese importer for help in securing a shipment of highclass birds from California. Practically all varieties of pigeons are desired by the importer. The department will furnish information to pigeon breeders who request it.

The largest precast sewer pipe on the Pacific Coast is being laid in Sacramento as the first unit in the "million-dollar" sewer line authorized at the bond election last Summer. The line is being constructed on the ground, in sections weighing twelve tons each. The sections are nine feet in diameter and will be lowered in place with a crane. The sections are constructed with "slip joins" so that they may be joined and sealed with cement.

The Hague-Thomas post of the American Legion at Grass Valley launched plans for the erection of a memorial to the Nevada county soldiers who lost their lives in the war. The assistance of the supervisors is to be sought. It is planned to include an auditorium to seat 1,000 people and also to provide club rooms for the legion members.

The automobile death roll in California during the last year was 1,623, an increase of 139 over the previous twelve months, according to final compilations made public by L. E. Ross, director of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics. The number of fatalities resulting from motor vehicle accidents has been steadily mounting in the last two years.

Plans are being completed for the Mountain View Union High School district for a reinforced concrete gymnasium building. It is to be erected adjacent to the Mountain View High School, at Mountain View, Santa Clara County, at a cost of about $80,000.

Forty-three aliens numbering one of the largest deportation parties to leave the Pacific Coast this year, are en route to El Paso and Galveston, Texas, from where they will be sent into Mexico and to European countries. The party included ten insane aliens from the State hospital at Patton, Cal.

The first break in the Tulare lake bed levees east of Stratford occurred last week from the heavy water coming down Kings river, this being the first water to enter the lake bed for four years, when much heavy grain was lost by flooding. This break was quickly repaired, however, and did little damage.

Executive directors of the Kern Chamber of Commerce are considering an extensive 1927-28 campaign to advertise throughout the United States by postal cards, railroad posters, and motion pictures, the resources, industries and beauties of Kern County.

WOMEN CAN NOW DO MORE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Keeps Them Well

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught school, some did housework, some found work to do at home and a few took up nursing.

Today there are very few occupations not open to women. Today they work in factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are also women architects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators. But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chamberlain who works in the Unionall factory making overalls writes that she got "wonderful results" from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Chamberlain lives at 500 Monmouth St., Trenton, N. J. She recommends the Vegetable Compound to her friends in the factory and will gladly answer any letters she gets from women asking about it.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

TOO MUCH REGULATION

WHATEVER may be said of the recent session of the California legislature, it must be given credit for killing a lot of incipient legislation, and as a general thing that in itself is a meritorious act. At every session bills are introduced, which if ever passed into laws would do great harm instead of a small bit of good which their proponents see in them.

Two such bills killed by the recent legislature would have placed a censorship on newspapers. The two bills were sponsored by women's clubs of the state, one making it a misdemeanor for any paper to publish the names of any person under the age of 16 years for a crime, and the other making it a misdemeanor for a paper to publish the name of the victim of a statutory offense.

It is an established rule among publishers to protect children and the innocent victims of a crime, and, so far as we know, it is practically a universal practice. But the imposition of a censorship upon the newspaper would have resulted in many difficulties, and would, undoubtedly, have been an entering wedge for those who would like to see other types of news barred from print. In fact, a censorship once begun can be expected to go to any limtis if the people will allow it. Fortunately the people's representatives were too far seeing to allow such a measure to pass, however beneficial it might seem at first sight in a few isolated cases.

Advertising Lowers Costs

NEWSPAPER advertising in America cost $235,000,000 last year, a gain of $15,000,000 over the previous year.

It has been argued that advertising is so much waste, so much added unnecessarily to the cost of the articles sold. In one sense, it is true; if the sales could be made without it, the prices could be just that much less to the customer.

But the world buys only on information. It travels because it knows where to go, what it can see, how much it will cost. It builds new houses because it reads how other people build and live and enjoy. It dresses in new fabrics because these come to its reading eyes. It is many times cheaper to get all this information by reading than in any other manner. The world would settle down into a jumble of ignorant, unkempt, leave-me-alone provincial units, but for what it reads in the advertising columns.

S. F. PREVENTORIUM NEARS COMPLETION

According to Dr. William C. Hassler, health officer of San Francisco, the first unit of the San Francisco preventorium is nearing completion, and it will be necessary in the next San Francisco budget to make provision for the maintainance of the institution. The preventorium being built in the hills west of this city for tubercular cases will cost about $63,875 to maintain for the year, Hassler reported. About fifty tubercular patients can be cared for in the unit now nearing completion. The name of a physician to head the institution has not been announced.

SYPHILIS NOT CAUSED BY VACCINATION

By M. W. Ireland, Surgeon Gen'l U. S. Army, E. R. Stitt, Surgeon General, U. S. Navy; and H. S. Cumming, Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service.

All Members Gorgas Memorial Institute

It has come to our attention that false statements are being circulated that have caused some people to believe or fear tha vaccination against smallpox may cause syphilis. Since the activities under our charge furnish direct evidence in refutation of this idea, we have considered it our duty to issue a statment that syphilization as a result of vaccination does not occur.

Before the discovery of smallpox vaccine, the only protection against the dangers of smallpox was by inoculating a person intentionally with the disease and thereby producing, in general, a milder attack than that contracted when smallpox was caught in a natural manner. In this way the inoculation of syhilis along with smallpox, or even of syphilis instead of smallpox was possible. This possibility also existed when vaccination firt supplanted smallpox inoculatod and was ulation, from the arm of one hulation, from the arm if ine human subject to another. Cases of syphilis following inoculation or vaccination with human vaccine were, nevertheless, extremely rare. Syphilis, however, is a disease confined in nature to the human species alone, and as soon as the use of calf vaccine instead of human vaccine became universal, the possibility of transferring syphilis by vaccination was entirely done away with.

Since 1917 the United States Army has vaccinated approximately 4, 700,000 members of its personnel; the United States Navy has vaccinated approximately 950, 000 members of its personnel; and of these 5,656,00 persons, not one of them ever developed syphilis as a result of vaccination. In not one of them was there ever any suspicion of syphilis in connection with vaccination. During this same period, the United States Public Health Service has also vaccinated 2, 918,748 persons in carrying out its quarantine, immigration, and hospital work. While the service has not always had the opportunity of following up these vaccinations, as is carefully done in the Army and Navy, no one has ever alleged that any particular individual vaccinated by the Public Health Service has contracted syphilis as a result of vaccination.

During the past ten years more than 2,000,000 persons, including school children, have been vaccinated by state and local authorities in co-operation with the United States Public Health Service, making a grand total of 10,568,748 vaccinations recorded by the government medical services, and not one of us has ever received an allegation or a statement charging that any particular individual of this number has contracted syphilis as a result of vaccination. In fact, there has never been reported anywhere a case of syphilis attributable to vaccination following the use of bovine smallpox vaccine.

The vaccine used in the vaccination of the millions just mentioned is exactly the same as that used by doctors in private practice in the vaccination of the general public throughout the United States.

SUMMER CAMPS GOOD FOR GIRLS AND EXCELLENT FOR WIVES

By Walter L. Hackett, M. D.
Detroit, Michigan

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

In recent years many fine open camps have been established where school girls may go for the summer vacation. There they have exercise under the proper supervision, hiking, tennis, dancing, swimming, rowing and regular drill.

They have wholesome meals at regular hours and long nights of rest in the open. The whole idea is splendid and without knowing it the girls are practicing the soundest kind of preventive medicine. And now the same opportunities are open to business women who can profit just as much.

Instructors at the camp help the young women get the most out of thenr vacations. Girls who have had no previous instruction in the right ways of living can learn enough in a short time about diet, the value of fresh air and simple exercise to carry them through another year's hard work and keep them fit until next vacation.

These open air camps are bound to raise the standard of health, happiness and efficiency among young women, and some day soon I hope to see the program extended to include the housewives and mothers.

True enough many young girls in high school will insist that the doctor is all wrong in even thinking that their way of living is not all right. But the men of medicine see the results a few years later.

The young girl in high school needs firmer discipline regarding her food, her clothing, and her ererecise. She is apt to be peevish Her appetite is poor and her posture is bad.

When she leaves school she takes a position in an office, goes to work with next to nothing for breakfast, takes a meager lunch of ill-chosen food, and comes home at night all tired out.

She gets no exercise in the fresh air. She is generally constipated and usually anemic. Her muscles lack tone and nutrition. She has vague nagging backache.

She marries and the added strain of childbearing gives her muscles no time to improve. Her night's rest is broken with attending to babies. She has no resources to meet the most trying period of her life.

She must see to it that she herself gets rest, exercise, fresh air(nutritious food if she is going to save the little family from disaster.

So summer camps for wives and mothers as well as girls are excellent things. They build healthier bodies and teach how they may be maintained.

Betty bought a range with an Oven Heat Control

The first cake she made with it was as good as mother's

Betty's mother believed it took years of experience to bake well.

But Betty changed that theory the other day when she baked her first cake in her own home.

For the range she bought has an Oven Heat Control which measures the oven heat just as accurately as Betty measures and mixes the ingredients. In measuring and mixing she eliminates guesswork. Now she eliminates it from baking—because Betty's own Gas Range is equipped with this device that accurately measures the oven heat and keeps the oven at any temperature.

Let us or one of the local dealers explain more fully how to bake your costly ingredients perfectly by means of the Oven Heat Control on the new Gas Range.

Y. M. C. A. TO HAVE 2 CAMPS

The Y. M. C. A. this year offers the choice of two camps for boys.

To fill the need for a camp within the county where the cost of transportation can be kept down to a minimum the San Mateo County Y. M. C. A. Camp Committee of which George Davis of Millbrae is chairman, and who is a member of the Metropolitan Y. M. C. A. Camp Committee of San Francisco has decided to hold a camp which will be konwn as "Camp Yu-Mi-Ci-A" (pronounced Yoo-Me-Kai-Ah.) This camp will be situated eight miles from Pescadero and about a mile from the County Memorial Park.

The first period for San Mateo County boys in this camp will start June 30th and last for ten days and will be for boys 12 to 18 years of age. The second session will begin July 10th and will be for boys 9 to 12 years of age. One of the features of this camp will be the cost to the boy, ten days camping for ten dollars. The quality of the food, etc., will be on par with that of Camp Roberts in the Sierras. The program also will be set up in such a way that a boy who attends either of these camps may take up advance work in the other the following year.

Camp Roberts which is situated near Strawberry in the high Sierras at an altitude of 6000 feet will hold three sessions which are open to San Mateo boys. The first will begin June 18th and will run for ten days. This period will be for boys 15 to 18 years of age. Immediately following this a two week period will be given over to boys 12 to 15 yeasr of age and the third period of two weeks will be for boys 9 to 12. The difference in cost of this camp over that of Camp Yu-Mi-Ci-A is practically the cost of transportation.

Backed by twenty-five years of experience on the part of the San Francisco Y. M. C. A. in holding camps plus the personal supervision of the local secretaries and a corps of picked leaders these camps offer an exceptionally fine opportunity for boys to enjoy a worthwhile time out in the open.

TUG SERVICE AT BRIDGE WILL BE DISCONTINUED

According to word received this week from the War department in San Francisco, the application of the Southern Pacific Company for permission to discontine the tug service at Dumbarton bridge has been granted. The tug has been maintained at the Dumbarton railway bridge since that structure was completed for the purpose of assisting bay craft through the opning of the bridge in bad weather or fogs.

When the permit was granted by the War department for the construction of the Dumbarton vehicular bridge, no provision was made for tug service on that structure. It has, therefore, been maintained by the Southern Pacific Company that if a tug was not necessary on the vehicular bridge, it should be discontinued on the railway bridge also.

An aplication by the Southern Pacific Company last year was denied by the War department, but the request was granted this week, and on June 1st the boat will be discontinued at the bridge.

Harry Potts of this city has been in charge of the tug at the bridge since its establishment there.

AGED NEIGHBOR COVICTED OF DISRUPTING FAMILY

Aaron Counter, 72 of Menlo Park, was found guilty of disturbing the peace of Mrs. Diana Hogevoll of Los Lomitas Tuesday in the court of Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin. Charges were brought against Counter by Mrs. Hogevoll, who claimed that he had been meddling in the affairs of her family and herself, and had disturbed the harmony of the Hogevoll home

According to testimony given by the lady, Counter had been carrying stories to Hogevoll concerning his wife. These stories were false the plaintiff claimed and resulted in a breaking up of the Hogevoll household. The affair culminated when Mrs. Hogevoll followed her husband to Counter's house on May 4, and after gaining admittance unbeknown to the men listened to a conversation between her husband and Counter. Following this she ordered her husband out of the house.

Hogevoll, it was stated, returned to his home for his clothes, accompanied by Counter and a third man, William MacDonald, and since that time has been living at Counter's house, which adjoins his own residence.

The Hogevolls have four children, the eldest 15. Hogevoll is an attorney at law.

In the justice court Counter was represented by William McMartin. Mrs. Hogevoll was without council.

WILLIAM BOYD urging "greater speed" in a thrilling scene in "THE YANKEE CLIPPER," an absorbing romance that begins in China and sweeps across the ocean through storm and tumult, to Boston Harbor; with Elinor Fair and Junior Coghlan. Showing at the Sequoia Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, May 23-24.....

Experiment With Color In Comedy

Harry Langdon, sulking because he can't wear long pants, is the funniest character the Sequoia has ever screened.

Setting another precedent for film comedy, Harry Langdon has introduced technicolor into "Long Pants," his new First National fun feature, showing at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, May 25 and 26.

The step is absolutely revolutionary for comedy, as much so, in fact, as Langdon's introduction of a blind heroine into "The Strong Man," his current sensation.

Climaxing weeks of preparation, a battery of special technicolor cameras were moved onto the Langdon set at Burbank, Calif., during the last week of production, and one entire sequence of the new picture was filmed in natural tints.

An elaborate special setting was built for the sequence, representing a medieval castle, its garden and its courtyard. Against this background Langdon and Alma Bennett, one of five leading ladies, enacted scenes in which romance and pathos vied with hilarious comedy.

It is understood that Langdon introduced technicolor into his latest picture as an experimental measure. He is known to be tremendously interested in color photography, and it is possible he will proceed with plans for an all-color feature comedy if the public reacts favorably to his experiment in "Long Pants."

WOODSIDE NOTES

Miss Clara Huddart passed away at her home here on Friday last. She had been a resident of Woodside for about twenty years and during a considerable portion of that time had been an invalid. The patience with which she bore her illness, the gentleness of her nature and her kindly interest in the welfare of others endeared her to all who knew her.

Mrs. Charles Josselyn and her daughter, Miss Marjorie Josselyn arrived in New York from Europe on Tuesday and will start at once for California, and are expected at their place in Woodside on Sunday. They have been away since last summer and have spent the most of the time in Florence, where Mrs. MacDonald Spencer, who was Miss Mary Josselyn, has made her home for several years. Mrs. Spencer and her daughter, Miss Virginia Spencer, will come from Florence later in the year and join the family at Woodside.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Schilling and their two sons, August and Rudolph, left on Wednesday for New York from whence they will go to England for about three months, returning some time in September.

Mrs. Oscar Blackington has just returned from a visit of two weeks with friends in Sacramento.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Donahue and family arrived at their home here this week for the summer season.

Mr. and Mrs. William Macdonald, who have been spending their vacation in Santa Barbara, were forced to return earlier than they had expected by the illness of their daughter, Annie.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Morsehead and infant son have arrived and will spend the summer at the Stanley Morshead country place.

The Parent-Teacher Association will give another of their enjoyable card parties at the club rooms on this Friday evening.

Mrs. Antone Davis has gone to Stockton to be with her mother who is quite ill there.

In Your Building Plans— Remember Telephone Service

TO make advance provision for telephone service in the planning of buildings—whether homes, apartments or business structures—is as important as to provide for water, electricity or gas.

Adequate telephone service is an essential consideration in the every hour comfort and convenience of the occupants of any building and by making advance provision, prompt installation is facilitated and costly alterations or exposed wiring avoided.

Helpful suggestions and illustrations for the aid of home owners, architects and builders are included in our new booklet "In Your Building Plans, Remember Telephone Service."

PALO ALTO MAYOR IS KIWANIS SPEAKER

A. C. Hobart, well-known realtor of Palo Alto and mayor of that city, was the speaker at the Wednesday noon luncheon meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis club at the Episcopal parish house this week. Hobart told briefly of the conditions which prevaled when he crossed the plains to Iowa as a boy, and compared those conditions with those which exist today. A few of the developments which may be expected along the peninsula were also brought out by the speaker.

The chairman of Wednesday's meeting was C. M. Doxsee, president of the San Mateo County Title Company. Fred Musso, a former member of the San Jose Kiwanis club, was welcomed to membership into the local organization by Rev. C. E. Kennedy, at the request of Charles G. Lambert, president of the Redwood City club.

The Kiwanis club is taking an active interest in the Clean-Up Week campaign, and on Saturday the members will arm themselves with shovels and help to clean up the streets.

The pupils of the Sequoia High School and the trustees will picnic at the beautiful residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Ross at Belmont this afternoon.

David Moore came over from Pescadero and registered at the St. Charles hotel last Friday. He brought with him some fine specimens of rainbow trout which were caught in Pescadero creek. Walter Knight, who sampled the fish, says they are the best he ever saw or tasted.

The family of H. E. Heiner celebrated the annual reunion in picnicking at Woodside last Sunday. About twenty members made up the gathering which passed a pleasant day on the sunny slopes of Woodside.

ADDITIONAL UNIT OF BAY SHORE HIGHWAY TO RELIEVE TRAFFIC

Contruction of an additional unit of the Bay Shore Highway that will provide an adequate means of traffic distribution when this new peninsula route is opened to motorists is planned by the State Highway Commission at an early date according to assurances given the California State Automibile Association.

Request that the commission immediately advertise for bids for this unit—from Broadway, Burlingame, to Fifth street, San Mateo—was made by C. C. Cottrell, manager of the Automobile Association Highways Bureau, at the commission's meeting in Los Angeles last week.

Cottrel announced this week that the commission favors early construction of this unit but that a matter of right-of-way adjustment remains to be settled. The commission set this matter for secial hearing at its next meeting to be held in San Francisco, either May 24 or 25. County officials and others interested have been invited to be present.

In the meantime, the Automobile Association representaative was assured, the entire commission will make a trip of inspection over the Bay Shore Highway project together with the State Highway engineer. The Association took the stand that contruction of the three mile Burlingame-San Mateo unit as soon as possible is most important.

"The Subway at South San Francisco will be completed by July 1," said Cottrell, "and oiled surfacing yill be finished as far as Burlingame before the first of August which will permit of the using of that section at that time. Without the section from Burlingame to San Mateo traffic utilizing the Bay Shore Highway will not have a satisfactory means of distributing itself through the streets of Burlingame and San Mateo or getting back on the Peninsua highway."

BURLINGAME EX-MAYOR NAMED IN DAMAGE SUIT

A suit for $27,253 was filed this week against Gordon C. Hess, former mayor of Burlingame by William J. Dillon in a San Francisco court. It is claimed by the plaintiff that Hess was under the influence of liquor when a car driven by him struck one driven by Dillon at Milbrae recently.

Mrs. Hess, who was with her husband at the time of the wreck, is also named in the suit, as are August and Rudolph Lang, who it is claimed supplied Hess with liquor.

The accident resulted in the injury of several persons, one of them a young lady who lost a leg as a result of the wreck. The present suit against Hess is the second one to be filed as an outcome of the crash.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEN Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in a recent letter to President Hibben of Princeton university stated that "all our principal debtors are already receiving from Germany more than enough to pay their debts to the United States," there was immediate protest in England against the accuracy of the statement in so far as it applied to Great Britain. Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill and others made heated speeches, but it was not supposed that the government would take formal notice of the matter. Last week, however, Washington was surprised to receive from Great Britain a long note attacking Mr. Mellon's letter and asking that the United States government "take steps to remove the unfortunate impression that has been created by the issue of this statement."

Secretary of State Kellogg conferred with President Coolidge and others and then handed to the British ambassador this decidedly curt reply:

"The government of the United States regards the correspondence between Mr. Mellon and Mr. Hibben as a purely domestic discussion and does not desire to engage in any formal diplomatic exchanges upon the subject."

Mr. Mellon, believing the attacks in the British note should not go unanswered, gave out a statement justifying and explaining at length the position he has taken in the discussion.

Diplomatic circles in London were as much surprised by the British note as was Washington. In government opposition circles there was an inclination to suspect that the note was meant largely for home consumption and for the benefit of the Conservative party, which has difficulty in explaining the budget deficit.

AMERICAN correspondents in Geneva say that the underlying idea of all delegations (except the American) at the League of Nations economic conference which opened last week is that the most practical step toward world reconstruction and general prosperity would be the cancellation of all war debts and reparations. Some of them also had schemes for the limitation of production of wheat, corn, cotton, copper and other goods, chiefly produced in the United States. The American delegates, headed by Henry M. Robinson of Los Angeles, were primed to meet all such suggestions. Soviet Russia, having settled her quarrel with Switzerland, sent a bunch of economists led by Valerian Ossinski. That gentleman said they would submit "concrete proposals to alleviate the difficulties of the bourgeoisie world and give a full report on what was accomplished in Soviet Russia."

M. Theunis of Belgium is presiding over the conference and 50 nations are represented. The conference will adopt resolutions and make recommendations, which, however, will not be binding on the countries represented, whatever may be the attitude of their delegations.

FACTS and problems of commerce and trade on the Western continent were brought out and discussed in Washington where both the third Pan-American commercial congress and the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States were in session. President Coolidge was chief speaker at a joint session of the two bodies and set forth the development of trade between the United States and the countries of Central and South America. He said that not only has the United States purchased more from Latin-American countries than it has sold to them, but it had for a long time been the chief foreign purchaser of their products.

Next day the Chamber of Commerce heard reports from the principal sections of the country, all showing present prosperity with prospect of its continuance, except in the case of the farmer. His plight, in the Middle West and the cotton-growing part of the South, was described as discouraging.

FLOOD conditions in southeastern Arkansas, northeastern Louisiana and western Mississippi grew worse steadily during the week. The water, pouring through new crevasses on the Mississippi, inundated a region about 5,000 square miles in extent, only a few narrow ridges being left above the surface. Most of the population already had been gathered at concentration points, but many hundreds were left stranded on the levees and small high places. The rescue of these unfortunates was being carried on as rapidly as possible, being directed by the scores of navy aviators sent there by the government. Civilian Dictator Parker was in general charge of the rescue operations and was doing splendid work. Secretary Hoover returned to Washington long enough to report to the President, and the result was a call for another $5,000,000 subscription to the Red Cross relief fund. The spread of disease in the flooded states was the cause of great anxiety and of such precautions as could be taken.

"We have definite reports of 25 cases of typhoid fever in the refugee camps, and there probably are many others," said Dr. William R. Redden, medical director for the American Red Cross. "And the worst part of the health problem is to come in a week or ten days, when the disease has had an opportunity to manifest itself. The health problem will increase as the waters recede."

A hundred thousand persons were immunized with typhoid and smallpox antitoxin, and the Red Cross obtained from the army ten mobile laboratories for the purification of water.

President Coolidge has indicated that he did not think it necessary to call a special session of congress for providing for relief and rehabilitation in the Mississippi valley. Senators Copeland of New York and La Follette of Wisconsin disagreed with him and both of them appealed to him by wire to call congress together. They asserted that funds from private resources would not be sufficient and that the flood victims were entitled to look to congress for assistance.

When Mr. Hoover returned from the capital he was accompanied by Secretary of War Davis, who was asked by the President to make a comprehensive study of the problem of flood control, in conjunction with the army engineers, and to submit recommendations for remedial legislation prior to the opening of the next congress. A flood-control conference also was held at Peoria, Ill., with numerous experts and officials in attendance. The people of the Middle West are so aroused by this disaster, described by Senator La Follette as the greatest in our history, that the national and state governments may be led at last to provide adequate protection against a repetition. Patchwork measures and dilatory tactics in the past have combined to make unified flood control impossible, according to those who have studied the subject. The federal government is held primarily responsible.

NINETY-FOUR men were entombed in the Everettville mine near Fairmont, W. Va., by an explosion. At the time of writing 29 bodies had been brought out by the rescue crews, and it was thought certain that all the rest of the unfortunate miners had perished, for fire was raging in parts of the workings.

THOUGH the peace conference in Nicaragua failed to accomplish its purpose, because the liberals would not consent to the retention of the Presidency by Adolfo Diaz, a two days' truce was arranged with the prospect of further negotiations. General Moncada, commander in chief of the liberal army, represented Doctor Sacasa at the conference and he said he was willing to treat further with Henry L. Stimson, the emissary of President Coolidge, provided the government troops were withdrawn from the Bosco and Teustepe regions where most of the liberals are concentrated. "Mr. Stimson told me," said General Moncada, "that the United States government intends to restore peace in Nicaragua immediately and to use force if necessary to do so." A number of the general's staff declared that if the United States formally ordered the liberals to lay down their arms and cease firing, they would be compelled to accept. But, he added, so long as the United States attempted to lay down terms, which included the continuance of Diaz in office, the liberals would fight for "constitutionality and justice for Nicaragua."

MARSHAL CHANG TSO-LIN'S Peking government executed the Chinese Reds caught in the raid on the Russian embassy grounds, and the other day it was reported that the Russian propagandists nabbed at the time were to be tried by court-martial. The Moscow government therefore transmitted to Peking a strong note warning Chang that if the Russians received the same sentence as the Chinese Communists, Russia would "immediately take the inevitable steps." The trials were postponed and a conference of Chinese officials was held at which, according to rumor, it was decided that the Russians should be deported. Mme. Michael Borodine, the captured wife of the Soviet adviser to the Cantonese government, presumably will have a separate trial.

Miles Lampson, British minister to China, has reported to his government that the Hankow faction of the Cantonese has offered to oust the Reds and make common cause with the Nanking moderates if the powers will cease further action against it. The offer was made by Foreign Minister Eugene Chen himself, but the London officials were suspicious that it was a ruse to gain further delay.

Some person or persons in Peking, apparently desirous of creating the impression that there was lack of harmony in the American government over its Chinese policy, sent out the report that Minister MacMurray had resigned. This was flatly denied in Washington and the administration showed considerable irritation over this and other false press stories from foreign sources. At present Mr. Coolidge does not see that any advantage could be derived by sending another note concerning the Nanking outrages, and he does not believe the other powers have agreed to follow up the former note and press for compliance because conditions in the ranks of the Nationalist party are too chaotic.

PREMIER POINCARE electrified France by the announcement that the government was planning the construction of a vast system of fortifications on its northern and eastern frontiers, so powerful and extensive that another invasion would be next to impossible. The northern gateways will be adequately safeguarded and the eastern gates at Verdun, Toul, Metz, Belfort and Strasbourg will be modernized. The plan also envisages the establishment of fortified works straight south to the Mediterranean.

EIGHT army aviators, the "good will" flyers who have been touring Central and South America, returned last week to Washington. President and Mrs. Coolidge and numerous officials went out to Bolling field to welcome them home, and to each flyer the President presented a certificate for the distinguished flying cross. It was announced, too, that posthumous award of the cross had been made to Capt. C. F. Woolsey and Lieut. J. W. Benton, who were killed when their planes crashed at Buenos Aires.

DETACHMENTS of the Arkansas National Guard were sent to Little Rock by the governor to avert threatened race riots as a result of the lynching of a negro. The victim of the mob had been identified as the attacker of two white women. After a few hours of strenuous work the militiamen gained control of the situation.

PRESIDENT FIGUEROA of Chile has resigned, and President Kondouriotis has withdrawn his resignation, agreeing to remain in office at least until September.

VELVET APPLIQUE IN BOLD DESIGN; MILLINERY TAKES TO WIDE BRIMS

WHILE velvet in itself is not a novelty, the fact that it is playing an all-year-round engagement on the stage of fashion is decidedly novel and modern. It is significant that prominent creators catering to the fashionables and elite of society in Paris whose decisions are generally accepted as setting style are paying much attention to velvet. This is true not only in regard to velvet as a trimming, but velvet jackets and coats are quite the smart style item of the moment.

Creating no end of excitement among those who aspire to the unusual are the new-vogue slender pastel-colored velvet coats. They are certainly lovely and one can readily foresee the triumphs they will score in the coming months. Just now they are being worn over matching crepe frocks, but later they will, no doubt, top frocks of sheer flowery prints. Short velveteen jackets are also modish, especially with silk plaited skirts.

As to velvet in millinery, it is scheduled to trim the majority of wide-brimmed black milan straws. The large drooping horsehair capelines in lovely colorings, simply trimmed with wide velvet ribbon are a joy of summer promise.

Used in a trimming way on frocks and coats, velvet shows a distinguishing mark of chic. Applique velvet scrolls and circles enhance many a costume of crepe or satin. In the instance of the models in the picture thus embellished, the designer uses a one should be included in every wardrobe of hats for immediate wear and the coming summer. Black satin borders and bands this elegant milan, two sparkling ornaments completing the effectiveness.

We are so accustomed to seeing the tiny snug crochet hat that a broad brim crochet type such as is pictured at the top to the right seems almost a novelty by way of contrast. This exquisite crochet visca is turned up at the back, has a fabric facing and a grosgrain ribbon band.

A wide-brimmed leghorn is always apropos for summer. The one in the picture, being finished and trimmed in a tailored way with handsome black taffeta, will be in taste with either one's suit or one's flowery chiffon frock.

Striped ribbon in enjoying a big vogue this season. It is therefore very modish for the hat below to the right to be banded with colorful striped grosgrain.

Summer will witness large drooping horsehair capelines in the full measure of their lovely coloring and transparency. Velvet ribbon in same tone as the hat is heralded as a favorite trimming for these exquisitely dainty shapes.

Public Demands News of Farm Conditions

The Agriculture Year Book, a bulky cloth-bound review of farm conditions, is far and away the year's "best seller" among the thousands of public books and documents. It retails for nothing.

Five hundred thousand copies of this vast storehouse of farm facts are authorized each year, although only about 400,000 are made. The government foots most of the bill out of a special printing and binding appropriation, and the majority of copies go to senators and representatives for distribution to the general public free of charge.

The sixth issue, covering the calendar year 1926, is now in the making and will be ready for statistical consumers about July 1. Contributors of articles number 250; there will be 1,325 or more pages, 300 illustrations and 471 tabulated pages containing 568 tables. The compiling, printing and binding to turn out this vast job usually requires about four months.

Copies turned out last year cost $278,473. Twenty thousand went to the Agriculture department, which paid $28,821 for them out of its annual appropriation. All of the remainder except 200, which are reserved for sale at $1.50 a copy, provided the gratis supply runs out, went to the house and senate.

Next in point of production of public documents is the Postal Guide, 95,000 of which were made and distributed last year.

Gold Jewelry in Many Styles

The gold jewelry that made its appearance at the French openings appears in many different versions. In some cases it is made of twisted strands of gold beads. Another type has overlapping plaques of gold.

High Waist

A new line in silk coats for spring is the rather high waistline, accentuated by a belt. There is usually a short shoulder cape.

Braid Trims Wool Frocks

Afternoon dresses for simpler wear are often in fancy woolen fabrics. These are simple in line, having generally plaits widening the skirt on the sides and trimmed with a leather belt often in matching suede.

Pantie Frocks

A new fashion recently launched is the frock with brief little panties of the same material to be worn under the very short skirt.

Pushing the ill-smelling lantern closer to the fireplace, he picked up one of the half-burned mesquite roots, raked together Pardaloe's scattered embers, and after patient effort, got a tiny blaze flickering. Having done this, he sat down on the blanket near the hearth, put out the lantern, and advised Tracy to go to sleep.

"What'll you be doin'?" asked the drowsy Tracy.

Pardaloe had brought in an extra blanket for Selwood, who was coughing. As he reached into his capacious hip pocket for the cards, he framed an apology. "They're gummed up some, John."

"No matter," returned Selwood curtly. "Give me the cards."

Pardaloe handed the chilly gambler the greasy cards and withdrew. Tracy's talk gradually subsided; he was soon asleep. In the uneven play of light from the hearth, Selwood, the blanket spread before him, mechanically shuffled Pardaloe's cards.

Absorbed and silent, he held the pack in his left hand, impassively slipped the cards one by one to his right and faced them slowly on the blanket—pausing at intervals to mark their sequence and to read in it the answer to the question he kept asking.

Pardaloe came in with a handful of wood ripped from a window shutter and fed it, silently and skillfully, to Selwood's fire. When the blaze suited him, he turned on his hinges to read the story the cards were telling.

He kept silence till Selwood had finished. "Dead man in 'em tonight—eh, John?" he said in an undertone.

"A dead man," responded Selwood composedly, and added: "This last time there's something new, Bill."

"What's that?"

"A dead woman."

Pardaloe, cramping his grizzly neck at the surprising words, bent his beady eyes close down on the fate-bearing sequence. He stared for a moment. Then without words he drew back his head; the dead woman was there.

Tracy slept only a little while longer. Pardaloe had gone to the wagon, and Selwood felt presently that his partner was awake—and that very probably he lay watching him; but Selwood himself had no desire to break the silence. Tracy did not lie quiet long.

"What you doing there, John?" he asked at length—with something of a growl. "It looks to me as if one of us, anyway, ought to be in Sleepy Cat a night like this. Everything we've got up there in the world is at stake."

"Everything I've got up there, Dave," amended Selwood. "You're a mine-owner now—I'm just plain gambler; remember that—will you?" He spoke the last two words with a touch of acid sharpness that did not often creep into his tone. Tracy recognized in it an invitation to quit. "I've been back up there tonight, since I brought you down," volunteered Selwood, to break the brusqueness of his earlier tone. "The Vigilantes are holding our part of the town, and they changed their minds, somehow, about burning us. Abe Cole told me we were safe. Of course, the other fellows might try it—but I just imagine they'll have most of the bunch on the telegraph poles by morning—if they've got enough poles. Dave"—Selwood asked the question in his accustomed kindly fashion—"you've played the cards a good while, haven't you?"

"Ever since I was big enough to set up 'n' play euchre with my dad. Goin' nigh on forty year," grumbled the old man, appeased in turn by the friendlier tone of his protege.

"Do you believe in 'em, Dave?"

"I believe in the cards," answered Tracy meditatively, "all the time. I believe in dogs most o' the time; not many men I believe in ary time—"

"Do you believe in dead men, Dave?" asked Selwood.

"Don't talk foolishness," retorted Tracy. "And," he added with deeper pessimism, "I don't believe in no women none o' the time."

Pardaloe stuck his head in through the shack door just in time to hear Tracy's words. "Right for once, partner," he half bellowed. "Dead right—every word right."

Selwood showed impatience. "Wake Bob," he said to Pardaloe shortly. "Hitch up the horses. We'll be pulling out of here pretty quick."

"Which way you headin'?" asked Tracy as Pardaloe disappeared. His tone was irritating, and the question found Selwood irritable. "I don't know and don't care much," he answered indifferently.

"Well, I'll tell you," remarked Tracy; "if you'll take me back to Sleepy Cat you'll oblige me. Oughtn't to've sneaked me out o' there. Then you bein' away from there, too; to talk it flat out, I don't like it."

Selwood tried to pass it off. He spoke with half a laugh and in the manner of his partner. "Didn't think you'd take it that hard, Dave. I did what I thought was right—"

"Yes, but—"

"Sorry I bothered you. It won't happen again. I hope I shan't be bothering anybody very long."

Tracy threw a sharp qustion at him. "What d' you mean by that foolishness?"

"Is there any particular objection to my meaning exactly what I say?" The retort was too keen to pass unnoticed. Tracy was silent for a moment. When he spoke he made a gruff complaint. "Whenever you get a chance, you like to take me hard—don't you? Anything I say—"

Selwood suppressed a smile. "I wasn't thinking about you, Dave. Don't you know, a man can feel that his game's about played? Mine begins to look that way to me tonight."

"Shucks! you got a cough started again, that's all's the matter with you."

Selwood released a hard little laugh. "Coughs don't bother me. I've been acquainted with 'em too long. I asked you a while ago whether you believed in dead men. Last night I dreamed I saw Frank Sanger.

"I thought I was walking down River street in Sleepy Cat. It seemed as if it was dusk—evening, or early morning—daybreak. I looked across the street. There was Frank Sanger walking on the other side, looking straight over at me. Looked the same as he did that night we—I—at Bartoe's. But his mustache was heavier. He had on a queer-looking hat.

"I tried to reach for my gun; I couldn't move a finger. All of a sudden, he started across the street toward me. His eyes were as big as teacups. And all the time I knew he was dead! I tried to cry out—I must have made some kind of a noise, for something woke me up. I grabbed my gun out from under my pillow. I was sure he was somewhere in the room. And there I lay in a cold sweat."

"Dead men don't walk the streets," growled Tracy. "Stir up that fire. What you sittin' there in the dark for? There's nothin' to a dream, man!"

Selwood made no move. "It's in the cards, too, Dave. I've tried 'em—three times. It always comes the same way—there's death in this deck for somebody. I guess it's full time for me to cash in, anyway. And remember, everything between you and me is fixed. You own the mine; I own the hall."

"Light the lantern, dash it," burst out Tracy, with a deepening growl. "Dreams don't mean anything! If there's anything wrong with the cards it's because they're hanging men in Sleepy Cat."

Without a word Selwood rose, felt for a match, and, striking it, looked for the lantern. Tracy kept up a nervous running-fire of talk, punctuated at times by abrupt pauses, but persistent. Selwood, holding the lantern in his hand, slipped the globe down over the lighted wick; then he paused and, as he stood, listened. Doubtful at first of his sense of hearing, the faint, regular sound of hoof beats soon fell unmistakably on his ears.

Selwood, extinguishing, by a short drop, the flame of the lantern, and bidding Tracy lie still, picked up the box and set it over the fire, stepped through the half-open door and stood for a moment just outside. He had not been mistaken; a horseman was nearing the cluster of evil huts known as Calabasas.

Standing expectant in the full light of a late-rising moon, Selwood was joined by the silent Indian, who, waiting only to get his orders, stole forward under cover toward the main road.

He reached a point of vantage at the moment the horseman slackened his pace. Scott allowed him to advance and turn and rein about in indecision only long enough to make him out. Pardaloe, in the interval, had joined Selwood and had moved with him from the door, which they left hanging awry on its one hinge, into the shadow. There they stood when, reining about, after speaking low to Scott, who had hailed him, the rider spurred again down the draw and halted before Tracy's shack. "For God's sake," he muttered, swinging from his saddle, "where is everybody?"

The stout-hearted little barn boss staggered stiffly into the shack after Selwood, the two other men crowding in behind him. Pardaloe lighted the lantern, Scott lifted the box that Selwood had chucked, bottom up, over the smoking fire, and Selwood pointed to the stool.

Neither he nor Scott made any effort to hurry the foreman. It was enough for them to study his bloodshot eyes until he should be ready to explain what was responsible for his peculiar mental condition and his unexpected appearance at Calabasas. He sat on the box, fingering at and fussing with his left forearm. About him stood Pardaloe and Scott, who had risen from the hearth, while Selwood stood with his back to the fire, studying McAlpin by its light and the light of the lantern on the table, wondering whether McAlpin could be wounded, and how badly, or whether he was running a huge bluff.

Selwood answered only after a pause and then impassively. "A few, Jim—why?"

McAlpin, holding his left forearm and hand pretty well up, spoke to Scott. "Bob," he said, "take your knife and slit that sleeve up a bit. I'm nicked in the arm, John, but it's naught; Carpy bound it for me. John, there's plenty doin' in Sleepy Cat."

"Have they hung anybody?" snapped Tracy fiercely.

"Hanged anybody?" echoed McAlpin, turning toward Tracy on the cot. "I want t' tell y', Dave, the biter's bit, th' night in Sleepy Cat. If anybody's hanged there the night, it'll be Vigilantes!"

Selwood alone made no exclamation. He stood quiet, with his eyes fixed on the wounded courier.

"I mean," exclaimed McAlpin, "the gamblers are on top! They've turned the tables. They've rallied hellbent, drove the Vigilantes to cover up town—crowding 'em to the river close to the new railroad station—I mean John Cole is wounded, Abe Cole is wounded, Chris Kickbusch is dead, Doc Carpy is wounded, and Starbuck is boss of Sleepy Cat—that's part of it, and only part of it. How many ca'tridges y' got, John?"

"Meaning they need 'em?"

"Meaning, the minute Starbuck took hold of the fight he doubled the blamed Vigilantes up like a jackknife—stole a march on the suckers behind their backs, got into John Cole's store, where was all their ammunition, stole it and burnt the store—that's another part of it."

"Are the barns gone?" asked Selwood harshly.

"Not yet. Lefever and the wagon boys are holdin' both the barns, but if the wind comes up, they won't save 'em. There ain't enough left of your big hall on the hill to roast a chestnut, John."

Tracy half sprang from the cot. He poured a torrent of wrath on the Vigilantes and the gamblers, with incidental shots at the fate that had kidnaped him away from where he could stand in defense against any and all comers, of his own.

Selwood waited, without an interruption, for the fury of the storm to abate. Old David stopped only when physically exhausted. "Now," he panted, looking malevolently at Selwood, "I hope you're satisfied. You've played your game, ain't you? Sent everything we've got on the hill up in smoke. And I can turn out, when I get up, with a pack of cards and start all over again. I ain't but sixty years old! Why don't you say something?" he demanded violently.

Selwood, turning toward his partner, rested his elbow on the rock ledge above the fireplace, took from his lips the cigar he had lighted, and spoke deliberately. "I'll have a lot to say, I'm afraid, Dave—more than I want to say to a man half sick, but it's got to be said, whether I like it or you like it or not.

"I want you to remember, Dave, first of all—the hall is, or was, mine—all mine. I took over your interest yesterday afternoon in Sleepy Cat, and turned over to you my interest in the Thief River mine. It was a trade fair to you and fair to me; you said I was giving half a dozen times what I was getting—I wasn't; but I was giving you a square deal, and you said it was a square deal, and I know it was."

Tracy tried to interrupt; Selwood patiently but firmly protested. "I gave you your say, Dave. I waited for all your cards; I want a chance to face mine now—and," he added, with a touch that Tracy had rarely heard in his voice, "I'm going to have it."

"You've tried hard to make a good gambler out of me, Dave—and the only reason you couldn't do it is because it never was in me. When my own blood kicked me out, you took the place of my—father—"

"Shut up!"

"But, Dave, I wasn't cut to travel the lines you laid for me. You said it tonight—I knew it yesterday.

"So yesterday I closed my game, Dave. I'm done. Yesterday I traded you out of the place on the hill. I gave you a half interest in the best quartz vein along Thief River. Ben Wentworth, a man as square as you are, is your partner. You'll never know need while the pay ore lasts, and there's enough in sight to keep you twenty-five years. Besides, I'm able to work awhile myself yet. So I don't see why you should wear yourself out, raving about the place on the hill being burnt. I owned the place, Dave; it's gone up in smoke and it's my fault, for, Dave, I'm telling you now and telling the boys here, I smashed the big lamp on the floor tonight and fired the hall myself."

Selwood was perhaps better prepared for what followed than his companions, who listened stupefied. It was a moment before Tracy could frame words; then he launched at Selwood a further torrent of abuse.

"Perhaps I played you a low trick, as you say, Dave; perhaps I didn't. Anyway, I meant to cut that string, and that was my way of cutting it. I've done you no wrong—if anybody is loser, I am.

"You say you're done with me for good and all. That's pretty hard to take from you, Dave—it's hard because I owe you so much and you owe me just next to nothing. But whatever you say or whatever you feel, I can't ever honestly say I'm done with you; you're the only partner I ever had and you can't ever change my feelings toward you. You've said a few things tonight I wish you hadn't said—but most of what you've said was coming to me, and I wouldn't ask you to take a thing back."

Before Tracy could reply, Scott started to leave the room; Pardaloe would have pushed his huge bulk after him, but Selwood stepped between them and the door. McAlpin tried to shut Tracy off. Selwood silenced him. "There's nothing to be said here that you all ought not to hear," he insisted. "I want you to hear it."

"No!" burst out McAlpin, stepping hurriedly over to where Tracy lay, and talking angrily at him. "I won't hear a word of it—not another word," he shouted in profane excitement. "I'm here on life and death—away with your jarring and listen to me. If the place wasn't burnt by you, John, it'd been burnt a dozen times since. The gamblers is after you, John—after you and after this fool man Tracy. And he wants to go back to Sleepy Cat! They'll burn him with his bed under him. They don't want no dead men in Sleepy Cat!" he shouted at Tracy. "John!" McAlpin, wild with anxious haste, whirled on Selwood. "Carpy told me to ride the desert till I'd find you. 'Tell him,' he says, 'they're drivin' us—and they'll shoot or burn up every manjack of us if we don't get help—and no more said. If you find John,' says Carpy, 'he'll understand.'"

McAlpin stopped, out of breath. A stillness broken by the wailing scream of distant coyotes followed his words.

In the silence Selwood stood, his eyes on McAlpin, pondering his words. Of all men in Sleepy Cat that might have sent such a message to Selwood, Carpy was the one whose call he could not ignore. Who had taken care of him when he lay sick? When money could not buy skilled nursing—when the ignorance of even well-meaning friends might have been fatal to him? Who but Carpy? Carpy was calling him. With the tables turned on the blundering Vigilantes, this never-failing friend—always giving himself unstintingly, recklessly, to the service of others, the man who never asked whether one needing help was worthy or unworthy—who never said pay, or asked for a fee—the man who was his own worst enemy—needed help. Selwood to those about him was grimly silent; but in his heart he said: "He shall have it!"

And one more question was gnawing like remorse at his heart. Where was Christie Fyler in all this deadly clash?

He shot a question at McAlpin. "Where is Fyler? Where is his daughter?"

"I don't know, John—nobody knows. Carpy's been tryin' all night to get track of 'em—if anybody knows where Christie is, it's Cliff Starbuck."

The name cut Selwood like a knife. "Starbuck!" he echoed, biting off the word, in rage. "Starbuck!" he repeated, as if to feed his wrath. "And Carpy gave me his word no harm should come to her."

McAlpin put up a hand. "Don't blame him—not for what he couldn't do, th' night. I'm hit myself"—McAlpin held up his forearm—"but nobody here seems to care a rap about that—where I got hit or how I got hit. But Carpy is a wounded man and his back's to the wall!"

Selwood seemed hardly to heed the interruption. "Starbuck!" he re-echoed, in lower but not less deadly tone. The fingers of the hand resting on his hip insensibly drew together. He seemed as he stood to shrink for a moment within himself. Then he started from his lethargy and, looking up, turned his eyes slowly from one to the other of his companions and back to McAlpin. "I can't pass up a call from Carpy," he said, speaking to all. "I wouldn't if I could; and I couldn't if I would. And it looks now," he added, "as if Starbuck and I have a score to settle. I hope not; but if it's got to be settled, the sooner the better."

Selwood made his arrangements with decision. Taking what ammunition he could scrape together, he would ride, he said, to Sleepy Cat. McAlpin was to ride with him to reconnoiter the situation when they had reached town. Pardaloe, openeared and chafing under his mask of quiet, listened intently but without approval. Selwood was talking to Tracy; when he turned from the cot, Pardaloe was waiting for him.

"John," he said, taking Selwood aside and speaking in an undertone, "if you was askin' me to head for Thief River same time 'z' you're headin' for Sleepy Cat, then don't ask me."

Swiss Religious Founder

The Mennonites take their name from that of their founder, Menno Simons, a Swiss religious enthusiast of the Sixteenth century, and they maintain, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, "a form of Christianity which, discarding the sacredotal idea, owns no authority outside the Bible and the enlightened conscience, limits baptism to the believer, and lays stress on those precepts which vindicate the sanctity of human life and a man's word."

6 things to understand about used car allowances

1 When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.

2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.

3 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

4 The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.

5 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.

6 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

Whispering Pines No More

Several of the tall, whispering pines in the Menlo Park Hotel grounds that were planted by the late Dick Kuck in the sixties were cut down during the week. More will meet the fate of the woodman's ax. The pines are dead and must be removed. In the early days of the gardens when picnics were held there, many a young swain wood and won his lady fair 'neath these whispering pines where chairs were arranged for the comfort of the lovers. Like the ancient pines many of these lovers of other days are dead. Time in its flight has taken its toll both from the forest and the human family, but those of us who still remain can testify to the pleasant occasion there in days of yore under the cooling shades of the trees that are no more.

Sells Property in San Carlos

Sanitary Board Organized

The new sanitary board met and organized last week by the election of Ira S. Lillick as chairman and L. H. Cook as secretary. The out-going member, J. A. Donohoe, made a brief speech in which he thanked the members for their courtesy to him while he was on the board and predicted success for the new members. The board will hereafter meet once a month in the office of Harry Morey on the highway at which meeting all complaints and petitions may be filed and where anyone may be heard having suggestions to make. He will conduct its affairs in a business like manner. The new president is an attorney and a man of fine business ability, who will give the business of the board his full attention. Many extensions of the sewer system will be made from time to time as the necessity requires. The woman member, Mrs. E. J. Stribling, was inducted into office with all the consideration and courtesy due her sex. She blushingly and sweetly acknowledged the honors paid her by the members in a notable address setting forth what she expected to do for the district.

GOVERNOR YOUNG SIGNS THE COUNTY GOV'T BILL

On Monday last Governor C. C. Young signed the San Mateo County government bill which fixes the salary of all county officials and their deputies. A similar bill is adopted by the legislature every two years. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman Parkman January 18 last and was amended in the senate on April 25 and April 15 and in the assembly on April 12.

The act is highly inconsistent in its arrangements of the salaries of the chief deputies. Some are raised, and justly so, while others are not and should have been.

For instance the chief deputy in the tax collector's office was not raised. Through the hands of this deputy millions of dollars are annually. She is responsible, in a great extent, for the accounting of this vast sum and should receive a salary commensurate with the responsibility. There is no doubt about it but the taxayers of the county would like to see the deputy in this position well paid. It would safe guard their interests.

The chief deputy in the county clerk's office was also discriminated against. As is well known this position is a technical one and the person filling it should have ability and some knowledge of the law. The present chief deputy is Miss E. L. Falvey, one of the ablest and most proficient deputy county clerks in the state. In order that she may be able to handle the intricate matter that come time comes up in the office, she has studied law, mastering the fundamental principles of the profession and soon will be admitted to practice. The young lady, with her wide experience and knowledge should not have been overlooked. She should have been provided with a substantial salary in keeping with the great service she is rendering the people of the county.

There are other discrepancies which will not be mentioned now but will be later.

Pay Telephone Is Almes Box

An aged Indian woman with a penchant for charity is the principal figure in a little mystery which puzzled the Visalia manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company for a long time. Every month a large number of pennies was found in the coin box telephone at the Visalia Southern Pacific depot. Since pennies cannot be used to operate a public telephone pay station everyone wondered who would repeat the same error so frequently.

Finally curiosity prompted the railroad company ticket agent to co-operate in watching the telephone and thus solve the mystery. Eventually an aged Indian woman was seen to drop a number of coins in the coin-box without requesting service. The ticket agent found upon questioning the Indian that she always made it a point to contribute to worthy causes and had chosen the telephone coin-box as the most convenient medium for her donations to charity.
